SASKATCHEWAN

Acts governing the municipal system in Saskatchewan are The Urban Municipality Act, 1984; The Rural Municipality Act, 1989; and The Northern Municipalities Act. In the province there are the following types of incorporated municipalities: Rural Municipalities, Villages, Resort Villages, Towns, and Cities, as well as Northern Towns, Northern Villages, Northern Hamlets and Northern Settlements. The incorporation of these municipalities is voluntary. Thus a Village that qualifies to be named a Town, can remain a Village if the population so wishes.

Rural Municipalities: are divided into divisions. A Reeve is elected at large every two years. Councillors are also elected every two years but in "staggered" sequence.

Villages: are defined as communities with not less than 100 permanent residents and not less than 50 dwellings and/or business premises. The Village is represented by a Mayor and two to four Councillors. The Mayor and Councillors are elected by the eligible electorate every three years.

Towns: are defined as communities with not less that 500 permanent residents. They are represented by a Mayor and six Councillors elected at large by the eligible electorate every three years.

Cities: are defined as communities with not less than 5,000 residents. They are represented by a Mayor and Councillors (the number varies).

Northern Municipalities: have similar criteria as above.

Elections for all are every three years.

Rural municipal nominations are received until the third Monday in October and elections are held on the third Wednesday after the nomination period. Nominations are held in Urban Municipalities on the second Wednesday in October and elections on the fourth Wednesday in October.
